PREMISE HEALTH AND THE AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF OCCUPATIONAL HEALTH NURSES CONTINUE PARTNERSHIP TO PROVIDE VIRTUAL TRAINING TO NURSES NATIONWIDE

BRENTWOOD, Tenn. – April 16, 2018 – Premise Health, a leading employer-sponsored health center and wellness provider, has teamed up with the American Association of Occupational Health Nurses (AAOHN) for a third year to offer continuing education opportunities for its nationwide nurse population in AAOHN’s annual conference spotlighting occupational health, environmental health, and safety practices.

The conference, themed “Soar to New Heights – Advancing a Culture of Worker Health,” will feature 11 live-streamed sessions out of Reno, NV, April 16-18 that attendees can participate in. Topics covered include psychological health at work, total worker health, pain management and opioids, OSHA compliance and a safe workplace, and confidentiality of employee medical information.

Over 225 Premise Health occupational health nurses will have the opportunity to participate and earn up to 13 continuing nursing education (CNE) credits toward state-mandated licensure requirements. Empowered by the web, attendees can listen to thought leaders, network with other occupational health nurses, and download educational resources – all from the comfort of their own home. Premise Health continues to be the largest supporter and participant of this event.

“Our nurses are critical to the services we provide for our members and clients, and we continue to look for opportunities for them to grow in their careers with us,” said Trent Riley, Chief Operating Officer at Premise Health. “Our partnership with AAOHN continues to be successful and well-received among our team members. We understand the value in providing educational opportunities and firmly believe they promote our commitment to helping people get, stay, and be well.”

For registered attendees who are unable to tune in during the conference, recorded sessions will be accessible anytime post-conference to earn CNE credits.

“The AAOHN 2018 National Conference provides occupational and environmental health nurses the opportunity to learn about current and cutting-edge best practices and the latest technology and resources for fostering a culture of health and safety,” said AAOHN President Mary Gene Ryan, MPH, RN, COHN-S/SM, CSP, FAAOHN. “Offering our members and guests, for the third year, the option and flexibility to participate via streaming video leverages technology to help
